February 2015 Issue 12

A Note From...

Winter is here, and many days it's nicer to be inside! Winter is a GREAT time to take a class or workshop and try something new! There are many opportunities coming up including the Blair Clemo Workshop, Teapots and Pitchers with Tim Cherry, Basic Sculpture with Jennifer Stas, and Throwing Cheats and Fixes with Lauren Brockman. The North Carolina Potter's Conference is held March 6-8th in Asheboro, NC and is an exciting way to immerse yourself in clay for days! You can find information about the NC Potter's Conference below. So, keep warm and consider all of the wonderful choices you have in Raleigh and across the state to learn something new this winter!

NOTICES

Next Gas Fire Date Set!

Any potters who have not yet tried the Cone 10 gas fire and would like to should see Trish or Tracy for a quick “Cone 10 Orientation.” Signed, glazed work should be on the blue cone 10 glaze cart by Sunday, March 1st, so that it can be loaded and fired that week. If the cart is full, it will be loaded, fired, and opened on Saturday, March 7th.

Studio Closing – Saturday, February 7th

The pottery studio will be closed all day on Saturday, February 7th for the A. Blair Clemo Workshop. Please consider attending!

Thank You!

Studio Clean Up Day Success!

A great big “Thank You” to everyone who showed up to help wipe down the studio at our Studio Clean Up Day on Saturday, January 24th! We made quick work of the clay dust in the studio! We are a community studio that relies on all our members to do their part to help leave the studio cleaner than you found it, so thank these folks when you see them!
